THREE ARMED BANDITS HOLDUP WOODSIDE INN

The Woodside Inn at Woodside was made the victim of a hold-up Tuesday evening by three armed bandits who secured $18 and drove away in a car. The three men went to the inn and ordered dinner. After eating, one of the men covered Herman Beskal, a waiter, and Mrs. Harry Nicodemus, wife of the proprietor with a revolver, while another of the gang removed the money from the till.

While the hold-up was being made, Nicodemus, proprietor of the restaurant was about to enter, but seeing what was in progress, he ran to the fire house nearby and phoned the sheriff's office. Undersheriff Farrel and Deputy Tom Maloney hurried to Woodside, but the bandits had already left. Several clues, are said to have been secured by the officers, which may result in the arrest of the men.

Stopping to render assistance to some persons who were stuck in the mud beside the Woodside road Sunday evening, resulted in the death of Melville B. Ralston, when he was struck by a car driven by Frank Towne of this city.

Ralston, who was employed by the Woodside Country Club, was driving to town with Frank Cavanese, another employee of the club, when he saw a car stuck in the mud at the side of the road, where a sewer pipe had recently been installed. The two men had assisted the other car to pull out of the mud. In it were Charles Donohoe, Miss Jane Mendenhall and Miss Inez Preston, all of the San Francisco sanitarium in the hills near here.

When the car had been extricated from the mud, the occupants of both cars alighted, and Donohoe offered to pay Ralston for his help, but the latter refused to accept anything for what he had done. He had just refused the money when Miss Preston cried, "Look out for car," and an auto passed close to all of those who were standing by the two cars. Ralston who was the last in line, was struck by the passing car and was thrown ten feet by the impact. He died almost immediately.

Frank Towne, driver of the death car, was returning from La Honda with two companions, Leon Arnold and C. Coffiori, all of this city, turned around immediately and returned to the scene of the accident. He took the injured man to the Redwood City hospital where it was found that he had already passed away.

At the inquest, which was held Monday at the parlors of Layng & Tinney, Towne testified that he saw the lights of the two machines, but supposed that they were approaching on the road. The lights, he stated, prevented him from seeing the people standing along side of the two cars until he was upon them.

The accident was investigated by Leland Quinlan of the sheriff's office, who also testified at the inquest. Quinlin stated that of Towne's wheels was off the pavement when he struck Ralston, but that the road was narrow at this point. Other witnesses at the inquest were the three passengers in Donohoe's car, Arnold, Dr. Herbert Clattenburg, who conducted the autopsy. Clattenburg stated that Ralston's death was the result of a basal fracture of the skull.

Melville Barrett Ralston was a member of a pioneer family of San Gregorio. He was the son of the late William Ralston and of Mrs. Joseph Pritt of San Gregorio. Melville was born on the old Ralston ranch in that place 34 years ago, and had spent practically all of his life in this county. He had for several years been employed by the Woodside Country Club and had been making his home with his family at Woodside. During the war he served in the U. S. Navy.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Floy Ralston, a five-year old son, Melville, Jr., and the following brothers and sisters: Mark, Byron, Winslow and Miss May Ralstos and Mrs. Ora Upton. He was the nephew of E. Ralston of San Gregorio, Mrs. Rhoda Hilledebrandt of Palo Alto and Mrs. M. L. Newman of Oakland.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the parlors of Layng & Tinney, and was conducted by Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows of which he was a member. Interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery.

POWDER AND SPARK SEND WOOD CHOPPER TO HOSPITAL

Keeping an open can of powder beneath an emery wheel on which he sharpened his axes proved disastrous on Monday to Louis Lopez of Five Points, a wood chopper employed by J. R. and B. H. Higueras. Lopez was sharpening an ax on the wheel when a spark dropped into a large can of black powder. There was a flash of flame and when the fire department arrived they found Lopez in a dangerous condition from burns.

Dr. Herbert Clattenburg was summonded and removed Lopez to the Community hospital, where his burns were treated. His condition is still reported to be critical. Aside from the injuries sustained by Lopez little damage was done by the explosion of the powder.

"Woodside"

Mr. and Mrs. George Dirks received a two days visit from their son Clarence who is a student at the University of Washington and a member of the varsity football team. He was on the field at Berkeley with his team on Saturday where he played a great game at tackle, but Sunday and Monday he spent with his family here. The Dirks boys take to football as a duck takes to water. Clarence is on his University team, Burnett is on the Palo Alto high team and George carries the ball for the Woodside school.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meyers and daughter moved on Saturday from Woodside into their new home in Redwood City.

The members of the Woodside fire department and their wives will celebrate with a dinner and program at the fire house on Saturday evening.

The Woodside Inn was the scene of a hold-up and robbery on Tuesday evening, shortly after 9 o'clock. Three young men arrived in an automobile and afte ordering and eating dinner, hung around until the opportunity offered when they drew their guns upon an employee of the place and upon Mrs. Nicodemus, wife of the proprietor of the place, and proceeded to help themselves to the contents of the cash drawer. They were frightened away by Mr. Nicodemus, who had called help from the fire house near by.

The Portola Night School gave a party and dance at the school house on Saturday night notwithstanding the storm that was in progress. More than one hundred and fifty were present and the storm without was forgotten in the enjoyment of the party.

Many residents of Woodside and Portola are planning to entertain friends following the football game at Stanford on Saturday. W. D. Cannon has invited seventy-five for tea, and all the accomodations of the Woodside Country Club, the Menlo Club and the Woodside Inn have been engaged for that night.

The Stanford football team is receiving its final tuning-up at the Family Farm in the Portola Valley.

AMERICAN LEGION THANKS COMMUNITY

As chairman of the committee which had charge of the arrangements for the celebration on Armistice Day and as commander of the American Legion, I wish to extend a personal word of thanks to each individual and organization who helped to make the day the great success in Redwood City which it has been proclaimed

Armistice Day should mean much to America—should mean much to the world. We believe that through the efforts of the men who fought and the men who died in the great war that the world has been saved from the iron heel of despotism. It is fitting, therefore, and it is proper that we should observe the day of the ending of the gigantic struggle which cost so much in life, in property and in suffering, and that we should keep it as a day of recollection and remembrance to the end that we may more highly value the freedom which our comrades in the fields across the ocean died to preserve.

With this thought in mind, I again thank each and all who took part in the fitting celebration of this great day, and who by their participation demonstrated that the wells of tender remembrance have not run dry.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS PLAN BIG HOSPITAL

A monster plan for the founding of a home for aged and infirmed members, and the establishment of a hospitalization and free medical service system throughout the state for sick and indigent members, has been adopted by the California Jurisdiction of the Knights of Columbus.

This was announced by State Deputy Robert A. MacKenzie, chief executive of the order, following a meeting of the state relief and hospitalization committee at the Palace Hotel Tuesday. MacKenzie stated that the plan, the nature of which is more pretentious than ever before attempted by the state branch of the order, will extend to every corner of the state and will be in full force within the next ninety days.

The committee which worked with MacKenzie and adopted the plan is composed of Dr. A. S. Musante of San Francisco, chairman; Dr. Arnold Burelman, of Los Angeles; Dr. Charles D. Christal of San Francisco, Dr. John L. Doyle of Chico, and Dr. V. A. Rossiter of Santa Ana.

The new relief plan of the Knights of Columbus combines the following major enterprises:

First: The committee has under consideration a site in San Mateo county for the founding of a home in the nature of a convalescent or relief home to provide care and quarters for sick, indigent members and for aged and infirmed members and their wives to spend their declining days.

Second: The committee is establishing a hospitalization system in the leading hospitals throughout the state, securing beds for the immediate care of urgent cases of indigent members and two en*dowments, one in Sacramento and a $10,000 endowment in Stockton,* the donation of James H. Sharon already have been received.

Third: The committee has secured the free professional services of all physician members of the order throughout the state for the care of sick, indigent members.

According to MacKenzie, all of these three projects will be in full swing within the next ninety days, having met the popular approval of the California membership as a whole. Many endowments are expected and the fund needed to carry out the work will be obtained by subscription and assessment of the state membership.

H. B. GARDINER'S STORE OPENS IN NEW QUARTERS

The haberdashery business of H. B. Gardiner was being conducted this week in the new store recently completed by that merchant as an addition to his Broadway building. While all of the fixtures have not yet been installed, Gardiner reports that business is going on as usual in the new location. The shoe store which was conducted in conjunction with the other business in the former location has not yet been moved but will be situated in a store adjoining the haberdashey as soon as quarters can be prepared.

The new location effects a considerable increase in the floor space of the business, and furnishes one of the most up-to-date stores on the peninsula. The entire front of the Gardiner building has been reconstructed, and is now one of the finest business blocks in Redwood City.

City to Secure Right of Way For Proposed Street

After a discussion of more than two hours in which practically every property owner in the block bounded by Broadway, Washington, Webster and Main streets participated, the board of trustees Tuesday evening decided to proceed with acquiring a right of way for the proposed street, connecting Broadway and Webster street through the block. The matter has been occupying the attention of the board for a number of months due to a lack of uniformity of opinion among the property owners affected.

The matter was originally brought before the board by the request of a number of the owners of property in the block. At that time John Munday, owner of a piece of property on Broadway, which would have to be secured if the street was built, was preparing to construct a two-story building. Munday was refused a permit for his building, because it was thought the street would be constructed. Since that time Munday's property has been idle. He has had an attorney appear before the board on two occasions to request a permit but this has been refused by the board because nothing definite had been done with regard to the proposed street.

At a recent meeting of the board a petition signed by a number of property owners of the block presented to the board. In this petition the signers asked that the street be not built, because they stated the cost would be too great.

It was, therefore, determined by the board to have a special meeting with the owners of property in the block on Tuesday evening last. Practically every owner of property was present, and the discussion was joined in by all.

The building of the street was vigorously opposed by two land holders, John W. Poole and Judge George H .Buck. Some favored the securing of the right-of-way for the street at the present time at about $30 per front foot of property. The completed street, it is estimated, will cost about $85 per front foot. With the right of way secured, the construction of the street can wait until the property owners feel able to raise the additional money necessary.

The latter course was favored by the majority of those present. Many who had signed the petition against the building of the street spoke in favor of securing the right of way, and upon a roll call of the property owners present, almost all assented to this plan.

Mayor Beeger stated that the board was acting only at the instance of the property owners, and was neither trying to force the issue or retard it, but would take whatever action the majority of the property onwers desired. As the majority favored the securing of the property, the committee appointed some time ago to secure the property was instructed to proceed with their work. The committee consisted of Thomas Tuite, Philip Brand and Julius Smith.

Its excellent condition has aroused comment among experts on copper and inquiries regarding the dome were received last week from the Copper and Brass Research Association of New York.

Frank E. Mitchel, president of the Sacramento Real Estate Board, last week announced the appointment of five members of the board to an executive committee to perfect arrangements for the twenty-fourth annual convention of the California Real Estate Association to be held in Sacramento next year. Glenn D. Willaman, secretary of the state realty organization, was in Sacramento during last week and conferred with the local board regarding the coming conclave, which is expected to develop into one of the best ever held by the association. A tentative decision to stage the convention from Monday to Friday, October 8 to 12. At least 12,000 delegates, and perhaps more from all sections of the state will be in attendance and the conclave is regarded as of particular importance because there will be gathered here realtors and city builders from 100 cities in California.

No longer will crooks be employed in positions of trust by the city of San Diego. To put a halt to the hiring of men who have "records" in other cities, all applicants for jobs, from police down to common laborers, must undergo fingerprinting, and have the prints scrutinized by the identification bureau. Bootleggers, particularly, have practiced removing from cities where they have been convicted, and obtaining public employment in a city where they were unknown in order to become personally acquainted with the police, county and federal authorities.

An earthquake of rather severe intensity shook parts of San Diego one night last week. The only damage reported was at the courthouse, where the water main to the street was cracked. Ships in the bay felt the quake.

Nearly thirty wells were started at Signal Hill last week in the race for the oil sands discovered in the "wonder field." Other operators announce plans for immediate drilling. Other wells drilled in the present program will require from three to four months to complete; and will cost $100,000 to $120,000 each, according to engineers.

Eleven new State banks chartered by the State Banking Department since January 1, 1927, have added total resources to the State banking system to the amount of $13,533,368.86 or over $1,200,000 per bank as an average during the last nine months. These figures were revealed by the State Banking Department last week. Branch banks included by State banks are not included in the figures, only unit banks being considered. The State Banking Department as a matter of policy has discouraged the organization of new banks with less than $50,000 capital, officials of the department said. None of the banks mentioned had a capital of less than $50,000.

More than 6,000 persons have been arrested in Bakersfield for offenses ranging from petit theft and disturbing the peace, to assault, grand theft and other felonies since the first of the year, according to a report just completed at headquarters by Chief of Police Phil Fickert at Bakersfield. During the same period, according to the ten months' record just brought to date, 284 men have been cited to police court for drunkenness. Last month's arrests totaled 642.

Service on steam railroads, electric railways and interrurban lines in California compares very favorably with service on similar lines throughout the entire country, according to a report submitted to the Railroad Commission by Chief Engineer A. G. Mott of the commission, summarizing the results of a tour of investigation of the principal states, with particular reference to transportation. The report states that street car and interurban electric railway fares are generally higher in the East than in California.

Plans to reopen the American Boy gold mine in the Granite Basin country, in Butte county, are announced by Ralph Smith, who with his business associates has arrived at Oroville from Los Angeles. The owners plan to conduct opperations on a large scale. A new stamp mill has been ordered and work is being rushed to install it before roads leading to the project are blocked by snow. The mine is also known as the Nolan project and has been worked intermittently for many years. It already has a small stamp mill.

The Los Angeles Examiner reported last week that the General Motors Corporation has secured options on two tracts of land in the Long Beach harbor district, Los Angeles, with the intention of entering the local field with a large manufacturing plant. One site comprises 600 acres and the other 300. Recent plans of the Ford company indicates that they will enter this territory with a much larger program than was originally intended. Consequently General Motors also has decided to locate a plant at Los Angeles.

Guayule rubber, produced from shrubs plentiful in the arid regions of California and Mexico, has received recognition by the United States Bureau of Standards of "comparing favorably" with plantation Hevea rubber. Reports received last by the California Department of Agriculture states that the federal bureau has just completed extensive tests which point to the utilization of the Guayule shrub for commercial purposes. The shrub, which produces a copious supply of milk, grows voluntarily over many parts of southern California.

The report states in the heading of suppression of fires a total cost of $738.75 to both county and state. Smith in the report estimates under the area burned, a total of 1583 acres of timber; brush, 6200, and grass, 18,542. In his estimates of damage done the ranger gives $1570 for timber, $9468.75 for ranges, improvements, $17,100.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water befor breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

Conan Doyle Now Regrets

At a dinner in London Sir Arthur Conan Doyle told of a conversation he had with a young actor in one of his plays who was getting $10 a week. The latter laughingly suggested that he and the author should divide their incomes with each other the rest of their lives. Sir Arthur refused and he said that he has since regretted it—the young actor was Charlie Chaplin.

A Benefactor

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce. It is just the tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. A GROWING INDUSTRY

A REVIEW of educational publications from several different localities indicates that there is a marked improvement in the schools and systems of education throughout the country. The problem as to the best method of administration, the curricula and the buildings is an ever growing one as the enrollment in the schools continues to increase yearly. It is a national problem that concerns every individual in every community and should be treated as such.

It is stated that at the conference of high school principals of Alabama held some time ago there was evidence of earnestness and a desire to bring secondary education to a higher level in that state, and conspicuously absent was any sign of indifference or protest against additional responsibilities imposed upon high school principals by reason of higher standards and acceptance of larger tasks for high school education.

There is one step that should be taken to put education on an equal plane with agriculture, commerce, etc., and to encourage the schools in their most important work and that is the establishment of a Department of Education, which would be in a position to conduct research and disseminate much needed information to all the schools in all of the states.

FILLING A VITAL NEED

THE ACTION of the board of trustees in requesting data in regard to the cost of constructing a subway beneath the highway for the use of children attending the grammar school and the high school, as well as other pedestrians, appears to have met with a general public approval. It has long been felt that such a structure was needed and that in time it would become imperative.

The growing activity of the highway is making it an ever increasing menace to the hundreds of children who must cross it several times a day, and the completion of the new school will increase this danger in direct proportion to the increased number who will be obliged to cross.

The board is now only seeking information as to the cost of the proposed work, but if they find that a strong public sentiment is in favor of the improvement, and we know there is, the work will be done and the menace of the highway will be removed.

THAT HIGHWAY AGAIN

SPEAKING of the highway reminds us of the times when we've seen the fire truck rushing out Broadway to some grass fire in the Highlands. To be sure, the wet weather has about ended the menace of grass fires, but there will still be an occasional call for the red wagon, and some of these calls are sure to be on the west side of the track. When the new fire house is built this matter will be solved automatically, but we think that until it is built some form of signal should be erected at the intersection of Broadway and the highway to warn highway traffic of the approaching fire engine.

The noise and rush of the highway on a busy day may cause the sirene of the truck to go unnoticed, but an electric siren mounted at the intersection and operated from the fire house would serve very effectively to halt traffic until the engine had passed.

We have never had a collision at this point, but have often watched transfixed as some car dodged away or the engine had to slow down to miss some one. We believe that this is a point where a little expenditure would result in a large measure of safety.

FIGHTING INFERNO

A MINISTER at Dallas, Oregon, invited the whole town to a special sermon on "Fire Prevention." He might have likened it to the fire-and-brimstone of Calvinism; but he didn't—he told it just as it is, with the fire loss of life running to 15,000 or more a year, mostly women and children and hospital inmates. It's almost as bad in America as the World war; and infinitely less defensible for there is in the fire loss no plea of national honor, no protest against outside assault, but only personal greed and carelessness and bravado. It is a moral and spiritual question that the church might well take up and handle without gloves.

Better Production Methods Discussed at Convention

By ESTO BROUGHTON

STOCKTON — November 14. methods of producing not merely better crops by the farmer but also more prosperity for the farmer has engaged the attention of the 60th Fruit Growers and Farmers Convention meeting here this week.

For although "the harvest truly is plenteous, the rewards have been few," as none can attest more surely than the cling peach growers who saw a large portion of their golden crop rot on the ground this year for lack of a "living wage" price.

Every speech of the convention, from that of Governor C. C. Young to that of State Director of Agriculture G. H. Hecke, chief of division of Markets Wells A. Sherman and Lloyd S. Tenny, federal chief of agriculture economics, touched upon the need of better marketing conditions.

Acknowledging California's lead in agriculture, practically all the western governors sent delegates to the conference at Stockton. The recognition this state has received is well expressed by Governor R. C. Dillon of New Mexico, who wrote Governor Young: "California has made such marked advance along practically all agricultural lines that we are anxious to get the benefit of her experience."

Not more, but better fruit, was indicated as the key to greater prosperity in the future by Wells A. Sherman, recently appointed director of markets by G. B. Hecke, under a co-operative argeement with the federal government.

After complimenting California upon pioneering in the state market director field, Sherman pointed out the possibilities of establishing a remunerative world market based upon the superior quality, and advertising the worth o fruit "Raised in California."

"The success of the California standards for canned peaches, pears, cherries and apricots is worth further exploitation," Sherman declared. "We have not tested the commercial value of a state certification of the specific quality of a processed article."

The reputation of a fruit is valuable and may legally be protected," he asserted. "California can go as far as she likes in establishing a "good reputation" and by law resuiring a "high quality."

More will be gained by co-operation with marketing agencies than by strife with them is the market chief's opinion.

No amount of legislation can cure overproduction, he explained. Outlining a program of relief for the cling peach growers, the chief recommended that young trees be uprooted, the industry paying the losers the value in order to curb flooding the markets in the future.

"Better milk has resulted in a better market," Hecke, headof the agriculture department, told the convention. "The quality of California's dairy products has been raised higher than those of any other state," he said, "and this has resulted in an increased demand, amounting to more than $10,000,000 during the past year, California leading all other states in per capita consumption of dairy products."

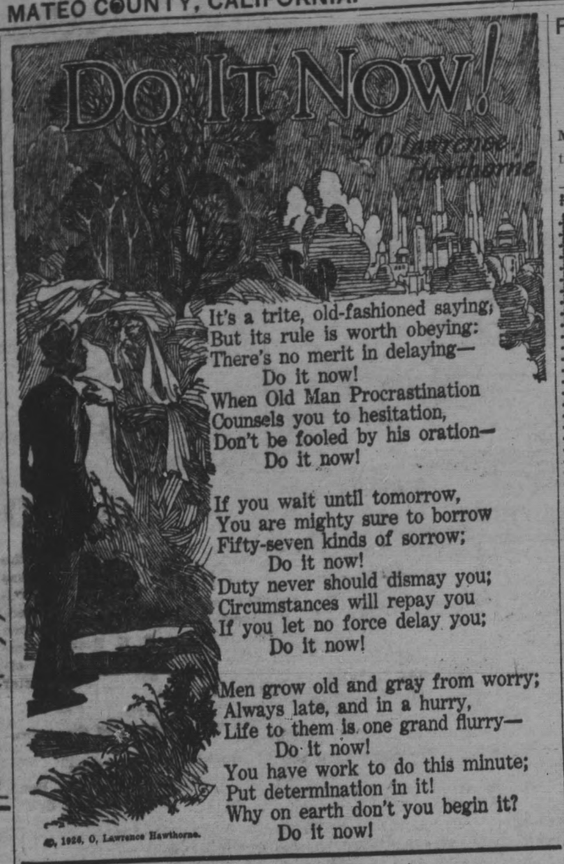
Among the county horticultural commissioners who remained for the Fruit Growers meeting on Wednesday and Thursday, after completing their state conference on Tuesday were C. R. Sanburn, acting commissioner of Marin county; E. T. Hamlin of Stanislaus; A. W. Tate of San Mateo; L. R. Cody, Santa Clara; Dooley P. Wheeler, Merced; R. R. McLean, San Diego; C. K. Turner Placer; Carl Spurlock, Solano H. J. Ryan, Los Angeles; B. F. Stroup, Fred H. Taylor, Lassen; C. H. Wren, Glenn; T. A. Willis Colusa.

A Bird Ties Up Long Distance Service

A blue heron recently tied up Long Distance telephone service for two hours on a circuit from Reno to Lovelock, Nevada. Telephone linemen arrived at the scene of trouble shortly after it was reported and found a blue heron hanging by its neck from the wires.

It is supposed that the big bird in the course of a rapid cross-country flight, blundered into the telephone wires, with disastrous results. The heron had twisted two wires together, short-circuiting the line and was held tightly between them, with no chance for escape.

Telephone men say that the blue heron had a wing-spread of six feet and that he measured five feet, two inches, from the tip of his bill to the ends of his toes With this incident on record, the blue heron must be listed as one of the many wild creatures which inadvertently cause telephone line trouble.



Infant Death Decline State Survey Shows

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, Nov 14 — Sunkist California babies, like sun-kist fruits, are a real quality product, according to the State Board of Health's annual audit of young native sons and daughters, just released.

"Fewer and better babies seems to have become the watchword of the home. As a result California's infant mortality rate declined several points for the twelve months just reported, while in the nation at large infant deaths increased.

Since 1920, the comparative tables reveal, the state's infant death rate has dropped from 75 per thousand to 62.9, or better than a 12 per cent improvement.

For the last twelve months, incidentally, the state's baby death rate went down nearly 6 per cent. In 618 leading cities of the nation, during the same period, the infant mortality ratio jumped from 72.6 to 73.7.

"The first year of life," comments the State Board of Health, "is beset with many dangers." The greatest field for infant life diseases of the digestive system, diseahes of the digestive system, says the board.

Provision of pure milk and proper feeding are cited as two important factors in safeguarding your baby's life during the "dangerous age." As the milk supply has been cleaned up, the infant death rate has declined, almost in direct ration. General use of either pasteurized milk, or certified grade A milk is recommended by most physicians as one of the best guarantees of healthy babyhood.

"Our urban districts generally provide extensive or at least adequate facilities for prenatal, postnatal and infant care," says the health board. "It is in the rural districts that such facilities are generally lacking. The state is attempting, however, to assist in the provision of the needed service in those parts of the state where it is lacking."

Glenn county, the state report shows, has the lowest infant death rate in the state for th year just reported, its rate be ing 26.1 per thousand, agains 39.7 for the preceding year. The county rates, as announced by the board, are exclusive of cities, however, and represent typically rural conditions. No report has been compiled yet on Colusa county's rate, but it is believed to be better than the state average.

Los Angeles county, with 486 infant deaths for the year, has a rate of 67.6, against 87 the preceding year and 93.1 in 1920. San Francisco's rate is 49.7, as compared with 55.6 the previous year, and Alameda county's ratio is 63.4 against 63.9 for the preceding twelve months.

In the smaller counties, where comparatively few births are recorded, the rates frequently fluctuate abnormally, due to the effect of a few deaths on a small total, the board pointed out. In Merced county, for instance, eight additional baby deaths for the year jumped the rate more than 6 points.

Here are the infant mortality tables for other leading counties for the year just reported, as compared with the preceding years:

San Diego	87.3	72.2
Placer	46.0	49.8
San Mateo	56.4	35.6
Solano	83.7	38.5
Santa Clara	73.3	72.6
Shasta	73.2	44.7
Lassen	77.9	62.5
Stanislaus	44.9	59.5
Merced	72.2	88.7
Marin	60.7	39.6

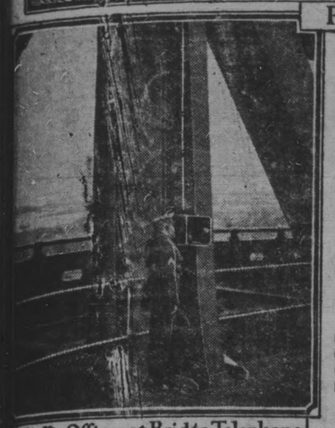
World's Greatest Suspension Bridge Has Complete Telephone System

Philadelphia-Camden Bridge



Traffic Officer at Bridge Telephone

How Expansion Problem Was Overcome

THE new suspension bridge across the Delaware river between Philadelphia and Camden is not only the longest suspension bridge the world, but is equipped with e most complete telephone sys- m for the control of traffic. Con- ruction on the bridge was started 1922 and it was opened to the blic on July 4, 1926. The channel an measures 1750 feet and the al length of the bridge is one mile. The total width of the bridge is 125 feet and its traffic capacity is 6,000 vehicles an hour.

The telephone system consists of seventeen telephones located at intervals along the mile and a half span and in the signal towers that control the traffic. These are all connected with a switchboard in the Administration Building at the Camden side.

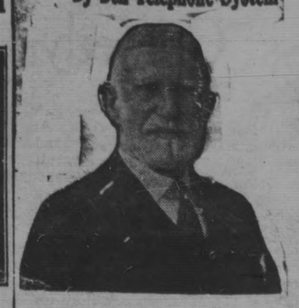
The system makes it possible for the administration officers, from any of the twelve telephones located in the Administration Building, to get in immediate communication with any policeman on duty on the bridge. At the same time it furnishes a method for the policemen to quickly report accidents and other emergencies to headquarters. If an accident should happen at any point on the span, traffic could be stopped, an ambulance or a wrecking car summoned and the situation cleared up quickly through reporting the facts from the nearest telephone.

Telephone engineers encountered several unique problems in installing the system. These were due principally to the constant vibrations and the expansion and contraction of the bridge.

Although vibrations will not ordinarily interfere with the electrical transmission of speech, they tend to reduce the life of the lead sheath and might ultimately cause cracks to appear in the sheath. This would, of course, expose the paper insulated wires within and cause transmission difficulties. The engineers have reduced the liability of trouble from this cause by encasing a cable for its entire length in 2 inch iron pipe, instead of suspending it from rings as is usually done in the case of aerial cable construction.

The expansion problem was overcome by bending two loops in the cable, each loop having about eight feet of slack. The loops are located at each of the two bridge towers at points where a separation has been made in the iron pipes. As the bridge expands, the loops become smaller, and when it contracts the surplus cable in the pipes is paid back and enlarges the loops. If this provision had not been made the telephone cable would buckle or break due to the slight but frequent changes in the bridge's length.

The First Man Hired By Bell Telephone System



Robert W. Devonshire

The oldest employee of the Bell System in point of service is Robert W. Devonshire, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, now resident Vice-President in Boston. He was the first man employed by any telephone company in the world's history.

It was on August 10, 1877, that the Bell System acquired its first employee. Today, it has over 360,000 employees scattered through every state in the Union. There are 47,472 clerks and 703 accountants employed in the Bell System. Of the clerks, 14,204 are men and 33,268 are women. Of the accountants, all but three are men.

30 MILES OF ROADS BUILT TO REACH NEW POWER DAM

Preparatory to starting its Mokelumne river waterpower development, in Amador and Calaveras counties, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company's construction crews have for the past several months been building roads from a point on the Alpine highway about 37 miles east of Martell, to the site of the big Salt Springs dam located on the upper reaches of the Mokelumne, 50 miles east of Martell.

In order to make the site accessible for materials and supplies it was necessary to build 30 miles of 20 foot mountain highway. Fifty miles of power lines were extended from the Electra power house near Jackson, to make electric energy available for construction purposes. The preliminary work has been completed to a point where it will be possible for a crew of men to continue operations during the winter months. A small town is springing up near the dam site, consisting of houses for the workmen, stores, hospital, blacksmith and machine shop, fire-fighting aparatus, dining and social halls, air compressor plants and offices. Every convenience will be installed for the several hundred workmen who will be employed here for the next three and one-half years. The camp has all modern facilities, and a most complete sanitation system. This gigantic development is now in full swing and activities will be continued during the winter months. The project involves the construction of rock-filled dam on the Mokelumne river at Salt Springs, at a point approximately four miles up stream from the junction of the Mokelumne river and its principal tributary, Bear river. The dam to be constructed, according to the company engineers, will be one of the highest rock-filled dams in the world. It will be located at a site where the elevation is 3800 feet above the sea level, and lies in a granite country typical of the Sierra Nevada range. Cliffs in excess of 1000 feet in height rise from the stream on either side of a narrow gorge. Motor-driven vehicles will play an important part in this development. Electric shovels mounted on caterpillar tractors are being used in the construction of the roadway which was necessary to make the site available. Motor trucks will be used exclusively to haul the large volume of material and supplies throughout the entire development over the new 50-mile roadway built from the vicinity of Martell, to the job. Storage battery electric locomotives, hauling 30 yard drop-door steel dump cars will be used to carry the 2,500,00 cubic yards of rock, sand and cement used in the building of the dam, which will be 300 feet in height and have a crest of 1300 feet. The rock will be quarried and picked up with electric steam shovels along the mountain sides adjacent to the dam. This massive pile of rock with its concrete facing will back up the water of the Mokelumne for a distance of five miles, thereby creating a reservoir of 130,000 acre feet capacity, making another beautiful lake in the high Sierras. From the dam, the water will be conveyed by a concrete-lined canal and tunnel for a distance of 25 miles to Tiger creek. At this point the water will be dropped 1200 feet through penstocks to operate a new power house which is to be built with a capacity of 70,000 horsepower. After leaving the Tiger Creek power house the water will be conveyed to the P. G. & E. Electra plant, located eleven miles east of Jackson. The same water will be used to increase the output of the Electra Power House, which now has an installed capacity of 26,810 horsepower. After passing through the Electra power house, the water will be returned to the Mokelumne river.

Red Cross Meets Heavy Demand for Water Safety Duty

Trained life-savers in the United States, qualified by the Red Cross as experts in all phases of water safety, now number 134,552 adults and juniors, according to the Life-Saving Service of the American Red Cross, which reported 32,506 trained and qualified in the past year. This number does not include other thousands who were taught to swim.

Training courses conducted by the Red Cross last summer brought out a uniformly high standard of proficiency. In addition, more than 20 winter training courses were conducted the past year. Swimming "institutes" at camps in Arizona, California, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Missouri, Oregon, Washington, and Wisconsin, "splash weeks" and swimming and life-saving campaigns under Red Cross auspices held in many States aroused great interest.

"The experience gained during the last few years indicates that the dangers involved in water sports can be eliminated through training and by the adoption of water safety methods," a recent Red Cross report stated. "When our communities provide sufficient swimming pools, bathing beaches, and skating places, and furnish trained leaders unde whose guidance both adults and children may enjoy themselves in safety, the number of preventable deaths through drowning will be greatly reduced."

The Red Cross is endeavoring to supply trained leaders in water safety so far as its facilities permit. To increase the effectiveness of this and other services, the Eleventh Annual Roll Call, from November 11 to 24, will urge an enrollment of 5,000,000.

RED CROSS VOLUNTEER WORKERS BIG FACTOR

Broader Industry in Home Chapter and in Field Development of Disaster Service.

Volunteer industry in the American Red Cross is on an upward trend, due to the broader demand for assistance in meeting disaster relief requirements. Men and women from Red Cross Chapters in the last year exampled by their work for disaster victims a greater activity than in any year since the end of the World War.

This service was given without stint and with the finest of spirit, according to Red Cross officials. Volunteer Red Cross workers have served by the thousands with the local Chapters in garment production, printing raised-type reading matter for the blind, in hospital service, as canteen workers and motor corps aids. Nearly all active Chapter workers are volunteers.

More than 90 per cent of the available reading material for the blind is produced by volunteer Red Cross workers. Volunteers produced 175,481 garments, 2,057,912 surgical dressings for hospital use, and 6,398 articles for emergency closets maintained by Red Cross Chapters in various communities for disaster and other emergencies. The garment production, large as it was, did not include the thousands of garments made for the Mississippi flood sufferers by volunteers. Another important volunteer service is the preparation and sending of 20,000 Christmas bags to soldiers and bluejackets on duty in foreign stations.

Approximately 250 Chapters participate in Motor Corps service, while the growing interest of volunteers in health work constitutes an additional community safeguard in emergencies when the services of regular nurses might be overtaxed.

Volunteer service will be an important factor in the forthcoming eleventh Annual Roll Call, from November 11 to 24, in enrolling the 5,000,000 membership to be sought.

5,000,000 MEMBERS GOAL OF RED CROSS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Need of Expansion Due to Excessive Demands for Disaster Relief and Other Services.

A Red Cross membership of 5,000,000 in the United States will be sought this year during the Eleventh Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24, Chairman John Barton Payne announced following completion of a study of the demands which the past year made on all branches of the Red Cross organization.

He stressed particularly the increasing demands of disaster relief as pointing to the need for an increased membership to aid in carrying the growing responsibility in this field.

"For several years our membership has remained at a little more than 3,000,000 adults," he said. "We are proud of this membership. It is a body of our choice spirits, but there are many more of like spirit who should be counted in this Roll Call. We need at least 5,000,000 adult members. We are obliged to draw annually upon our reserves, and the demands upon us increase each year. Our Roll Call funds should meet our normal needs and add something to our reserves for the great disasters. We must have a large reserve. No one can tell when a situation may arise when this reserve will be essential to the lives of thousands.

"The Red Cross cannot wait to raise funds," Judge Payne declared. "Action prompt, instant, is its life. Instant action means the lives of many. It must be strong, it must be ready; this means a large reserve."

Total expenditures of the American Red Cross in the fiscal year to June 30 last in all fields amounted to $16,139,348.60, of which $11,360,348.60 represented the National Organization's appropriations and $4,779,000 the cost to the Red Cross local chapters. Included in this total was a disaster relief, for which $8,216,893.31 had actually been expended to the close of the year. This does not cover expenditures which continued to be made in the Mississippi Valley flood, or in other disasters originating during the fiscal year but whose operations extended over into the current period.

Service to disabled veterans, another outstanding demand on the organization, called for $2,930,223.86, and service to men of the Regular Army and Navy, $507,832.30. Maintenance of an enrolled Nurses' Reserve, from which the needs of disaster service and other emergencies are met, and which numbers more than 45,000 nurses totalled $45,248.83. For the Public Health Nursing program, a nation-wide activity of the Red Cross, $801,068.99 was expended. Other services contributing to health and well-being included instruction in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, for which $165,380.16 was spent; Nutrition Instruction, which teaches thousands annually correct food principles in relation to health, $171,370.73; First Aid and Life Saving, a service which is actually curtailing accident and water casualties, $354,780.06; Junior Red Cross, the children's branch of Red Cross activity, and one of the most unique organizations in the world, $582,434.23.

Other Red Cross Chapter activities, including Home Service to civilians amounted to $1,220,000; while other national domestic operations required $236,147.17.

An outstanding American contribution to the rest of the world is Red Cross assistance in foreign disasters, which the report shows, called for $256,962 to the end of the fiscal year. Activities under the League of Red Cross Societies, Junior Red Cross foreign projects, assistance to American insular chapters, and other foreign and insular work completed the demands on the total appropriation for the year.

These expenditures were cited by Chairman Payne as emphasizing the need for a growing membership and increased income.

Red Cross Nurses Aid In Every Great Disaster

Two major disasters, the Florida hurricane and the Mississippi flood, required the services of Red Cross nurses in large numbers over a long period of time in the past year.

In the Florida storm, service of 350 nurses is recorded. It is estimated that about 100 others assisted in the first few days as volunteers. The total number of nurses in the Mississippi valley flood was approximately 200. In every major disaster the services of Red Cross nurses are needed, lending added importance to the enrolled reserve which now numbers more than 45,000 Red Cross nurses. These nurses are available for any emergency, though they are on duty in hospitals and in private practice. They constitute the reserve of the Army and Navy nurse corps in time of war.

Besides emergency duty, Red Cross nurses assisted materially in many local services, Chapter reports to National Headquarters indicate. The Eleventh Annual Roll Call of the Red Cross, from November 11 to 24, it is pointed out, is an opportunity for everyone to become identified with the Red Cross.

RED CROSS ADVANCES IN HEALTH PROTECTION

Record for Progress Is Made in Protecting People of Vast Flooded Section.

Record health protective activities marked the year's service of the American Red Cross in this field. The outstanding health accomplishment was the successful conclusion of the emergency health program launched as part of the relief work in the Mississippi Valley flood. In co-operation with State and Federal health agencies, the Red Cross successfully conducted a campaign designed to prevent epidemics as a result of flood conditions.

Thousands were immunized against typhoid and smallpox, preventive measures against malaria were undertaken, and as the flood receded an intensive clean-up program was set in motion to purify water supplies, provide sanitary surroundings of rural communities and complete other health protective steps.

Beside the emergency work, the Red Cross Public Health Nursing Service developed about 100 new community nursing and health services throughout the country. Nurse instructors and others operating under the Red Cross also extended training in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick to both adult and junior groups, the latter in educational institutions in certain instances. Every State, Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Porto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, had Home Hygiene classes which showed a large increase.

One contribution to national health achieving a growing recognition is the nutrition instruction service, through which thousands of adults and school children are learning the proper foods for health and the fundamentals of correct food habits in relation to health. Classes include housewives, school children, foster-mothers, policewomen, women having charge of homes and institutions, business girls and students in universities and colleges.

Besides these direct services for better health, the Red Cross enrolled reserve of nurses mounts to more than 45,000. These nurses are available for disaster relief service, epidemics and other serious emergencies, and are on call for duty with the Army, Navy and the Veterans' Bureau.

Red Cross health services are increasing in scope, it is pointed out, in calling attention to the forthcoming enrollment of new members in the Red Cross ranks, through whose support all Red Cross activities are made possible. The enrollment will take place from November 11 to 24.

Junior Red Cross Army of 6,000,000 in Schools

Members of the Junior Red Cross proved a new capacity for service during the Mississippi flood, according to reports to Red Cross National Headquarters covering their work.

This group of enthusiastic school children responded spontaneously and generously to the needs of the flood victims. An indication of the importance of this help is contained in the report that Juniors in Boston alone contributed $7,500 to the relief fund.

Junior Red Cross members shared in reconstruction work in the Midwest tornado several years ago, after the Florida storm, and are in the post-flood operations of the Red Cross among the people in the Mississippi Valley.

Junior Red Cross has 5,822,757 members, an increase of 273,329 in the last year.

More than a million of the Junior Red Cross membership is distributed in the Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Alaska, and includes Indian and Eskimo children. Through the medium of the Junior Red Cross in the United States, and similar groups abroad, children all over the world are being brought into closer understanding by international correspondence carried on by classes in the schools.

The Juniors at present have nearly twice the membership of the senior organization, but in the forthcoming membership enrollment of the Red Cross, from November 11 to 24, the goal of the adult membership is 5,000,000.

Foreign Calls for Help Answered by Red Cross

Despite the unusual requirements of relief in 77 disasters within the United States, the people of the country, through the American Red Cross, extended relief to sufferers in 20 disasters in foreign lands.

These included hurricanes in the West Indies, desolating portions of Cuba, Santo Domingo, Porto Rico, the Isle of Pines, the Bahamas, and other islands in the group; fires in Haiti and Porto Rico, floods in Mexico and Jugoslavia, earthquakes in Japan, the Azores Islands, Armenia and Albania, and refugee relief operations in Bulgaria, Syria, and China.

During the Eleventh Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24, the American Red Cross will seek a membership of 5,000,000 to keep its disaster relief and other services constantly ready for any call.

That's the beauty of Gas fuel

You'll have clean, comfortable, carefree heating all winter long when you heat your home with gas fuel. And there'll be no soot or dirt.

So buy a good gas-fired furnace. Have it installed correctly. For that means long years of economical operation. But remember — there's little economy in a cheap furnace installation. So talk to our gas heating specialist first, for he'll gladly advise you about specifications that insure economical and efficient gas heating.

Junior Class to Stage High Class Comedy

If you were fortunate enough to witness "The Book of Charm," when it was presented at Stanford last year or the film version of the play called, "The Boy Friend," you would not hesitate at a chance to see it again. Of course you will enjoy it when you see it for the first time as every one else has.

The junior class of the Sequoia Union High School is using the play for its annual production at the high school auditorium on December 3.

Some one's going to miss it, don't let it be you!

It is a comedy by John A. Kirkpatrick in three acts and promises to be the most difficult of any performance ever attempted by any one class of the high school.

The cast numbers over fifteen characters and the high cost of costuming has driven the ticket committee to sell seats at two prices. The best seats will go for 75c and the rest for the usual price of 50c.

They'll sell too! Watch 'em.

Produced by special arrangement with Samuel French of New York.

Campagne was stellar man for the Sequoia 20's. The 10's lost their game to Paly by a score of 11 to 7 . When the final gun went off the score was 7 to 7 tie. In the three minutes extra that had to be played, Paly added 4 more points to their seven; this made the final score Palo Alto 11, Sequoia 7 .

HI-Y CLUB WILL DELIVER BASKETS

Realizing that there are numbers of people in Redwood City who would be very glad to give a Thanksgiving basket or articles of food to make up such baskets if they only know how to get in touch with worthy homes, the Sequoia Hi-Y Club has decided to again serve the community in the distribution of these things. Under the direction of Donald Bogie and Ramon Dimmick, the advisers of this club, the Thanksgiving baskets will be picked up and delivered to homes where these will bring much cheer. The club itself decided to donate at least one basket. Members of this organization will pick up all such food and deliver the same on the day prior to Thanksgiving. Two years ago this club gave a similar service to the community. Those desiring to give such articles should call 974-J.

Sequoia Union High School announces the choice of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," as the production for the annual Christmas play to be presented in the local auditorium Friday evening, December 16.

The play, the story of old "Schooge" is made up of several scenes with interludes which are made up from selections from the choir and orchestra along with a pageant of old English customs, in costume. During the course of the play, the actors and actresses file down the aisles followed by villagers, servants, and the chorus. The production is different from anything ever attempted by the high school thespians, and promises to be a beautiful pageant of color and costume.

Bay Counties District Hold F. A. U. Convention

The Bay Counties District Convention of the Fraternal Ail Union was held in Gilroy, California, on Saturday, November 12 1927, with Agnes Quinn of Palo Alto, president, presiding. S. L. Kern, national vice-president being present, was escorted to a seat of honor.

The Gorgas Idea

Better Health Longer Life

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

EXCESS PLEASURE IS ENEMY OF HEALTH

By Jacob Geiger, M .D.

St. Louis, Mo.

Member Gorgas Memorial

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as a part of its better health and longer life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.)

If our American people had as keen an appreciation for health as they have for pleasure, the perpetuity of our nation would be more assured than it is. Our reputation abroad abounds with money making, money-spending, luxury, and crime, all of which leads to national disintegration.

No people can expect poise and progress to be maintained upon a gold reserve, big business, or heavy commerce. The one most needful foundation stone for any people who hope to resist the degenerating influence of modern civilization is physical health and robustness. Without this no culture, however, lofty, can long exist. Health, like other enduring virtues, must be cultivated. There is a close relation between morality and health. We need some tincture of the Franklin philosophy of industry, frugality, and sobriety for a foundation. We need some self restraint against too profound indulgence in luxury, pleasure, excees food, sex and excitement. Luxury has been the undoing of all ancient civilization. It has proved itself perfectly incompatible with health, sturdy muscles, clear brains, and balanced nervous systems.

Our national life is chaotic. With our cars we ride everywhere The radio and movie make us lose sleep. The cafes have disturbed the home life. We are eager for constant thrills and excitement and are becoming a nation of neurotics. Our insane and mental perverts, together with the nervous persons, are increasing more rapidly than the population percentage. Those who view the future tell us the crying need of our people is for a crusade of health. The imperative demand is for a more simple life, sane amusements, mental poise, healthy literature, daily walking, plain food, calm public atmosphere, and more sleep. These things lead to health.

The problem of national health is one of individual application. It may not be passed over to others. Each citizen must bear his full responsibility.

The one procedure of greatest value to the maintenance of good health is the annual physical examination by the family physician. The advantage of this yearly inventory is the early detection of those diseases which are symptomless until well developed by which time medical attention is of no avail.

Phone Calls Should Be Answered Promptly

Believing that telephone calls should immediately be answered by the parties from whom they are placed, C. R. Lindner, in charge of publication of the New York American and general manager of the Detroit Times is reported to have sent out the following interesting memorandum to members of his organization, it is stated in a recent issue of "Printer's Ink."

"The management hears much criticism, from many directions of difficulty and delay in reaching executives on the telephone. People on whose favor our business depends resent questioning as to their pedigree on the phone before they are permitted to give us business or information which we are anxious to receive.

"We believe that New York American men can do few things that will bring quicker commendation of the spirit of our organization than to talk directly, without questioning by secretaries or assistants, with whomever does the favor of calling."

BAY SHORE ROAD EXTENSION PLANNED

By CLEM WHITAKER
Staff Correspondent Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 11— In his first definite statement of policy on the Bay Shore Highway, Bert B. Meek, director of the State Department of Public Works, today informed the Times correspondent that the highway commission hopes to complete the road as far as Redwood City during the present biennium, or before July, 1929.

This program, he said, includes the following work:

1.—Re-routing of a portion of the highway between San Francisco and South San Francisco underpass, and heavy grading of this section.

2.—Surfacing from the under pass to Burlingame.

3.—Grading from Burlingame to Redwood City.

San Francisco's action in approving the bonds at Tuesday's election to provide for construction linking up with the Bay Shore program, declared Meek will have the effect of speeding up state work, as it is an evidence of good faith on the part of the bay city.

"The various localities interested have shown a willingness to assume their share of the burden," said Meek, "and the state wants to make good on its shares as rapidly as possible. I feel confident that we can complete preliminary work upon the section to Redwood City, as indicated, during the present biennium."

SACRAMENTO—Nov. 14— Intermediate improvement of the Bay Shore Highway was planned today with the opening of bids by the State Highway Commission for the grading and rock surfacing of five and two-tenths miles of the highway from South San Francisco to Broadway Station.

The letting of the bids in the near future to Granfield ,Farrar and Carlin, a San Francisco firm, is anticipated since it was the low bidder with a bid of $107,310 for an "A" type construction and $108,210 for a "B" type.

The state engineer's estimate was $140,005 for either construction.

It stripped down to this: If the police found Galbraith at Elkwan Garth Guthrie was done. Cameron might fix it with the company, but the authorities would be merciless. Then the smug Charles could revel in his "I told you sos," and Ethel—he had not thought of Ethel, whose Christmas letters he had not answered, since he found Joan Quarrier on the Albany clearing—she could thank Heaven for her lucky escape.

"But the police won't find him at Elkwan!" Guthrie rasped through his teeth, and went to the trade-house to make his plans with Etienne.

"Did you have any trouble getting him up here?" Guthrie asked.

"No, he holler some, but he was lashed in good."

Then Guthrie explained the part Etienne was to play when the police appeared. They would want to interview him, and must find him in bed, a sick man. Accordingly, he must have the bandages, which Miss Quarrier would prepare at once, ready to put on. The children would have to be coached and kept out of the way.

Savanne took the pipe from his mouth and leaned toward his chief, the muscles in his swart face knotted with the intensity of his feeling. For a space the two men hardly breathed as the narrowed eyes of the half-breed bored into Guthrie's quizzical gaze. Then Etienne said slowly: "You are good frien' to me an' my familee. I feex dese poleece—if you—say so."

Slowly, as he read the stark sincerity of the offer in the other's face—sensed that his friend of the dusky skin was bringing to the altar of their friendship the supreme gift, the hazard of his life, Guthrie's eyes softened with the affection which two years of river and coast and trail with Etienne Savanne had kindled. He reached out a long arm and took the sinewy hand of the other.

"I won't forget—my friend."

The swart face of the half-breed lit with pride at the words, then turning away, he threw over his shoulder: "I get de bandage from M'a'mselle Quarrier an' show Marie how to mak' good nurse."

* * * * * * *

"His temperature's risen to 103. I can hear it in the other lung now."

Joan Quarrier entered the living room, from which Old Anne had taken the supper dishes.

"Double pneumonia!" Guthrie muttered. "Not a chance, after the flu, is there? Poor old Craig! We've done what we could."

She raised her eyes to the man who slouched, head in hands, elbows on knees. "Friendship is a very real thing to you."

He looked up. "Yes, so real that without a thought of the cost to you, I brought you into this—"

"That was rather a fine compliment to me, Mr. Exile, that you should feel sure of me—know that I would come."

"I thought only of him—of what I owed him." For an interval he was silent, then continued with a look that brought the blood to her face: "You?—I knew you would come—when you understood. But it was unfair—wrong."

"Why wrong?" she demurred. "Etienne or this man, what did it matter? You needed me to help you and I came."

"But I've done worse still. If the police find him here, you'll be subject to the law—an accessory. I did not think. I was mad, but I want to get you out of this before it's too late. I'll take you to Albany tomorrow."

As Joan Quarrier stared at the speaker, her surprise slowly shifted to anger. The dark eyes lit with a look new to the man who watched.

"You mean that? You think I'd desert him, dying, your friend?"

He shrugged hopelessly in the face of her determination. "You're in a false position. I had no right—"

"Stop!" she commanded, raising her hand in finality. "Now, if they come, what will you do?"

For a space he could not answer, swept by a wave of pride in the staunchness of the girl of whom he had asked so much.

"I've got to feed them here. Can you keep him under an opiate?"

"Yes, he's under one now. If he grows delirious, as some do, he'll injure himself—try to get up. We'll have to keep him lashed to the bed."

"I'll get them over to the trade-house as soon as they eat. They may not stay more than a night, but when they fail to find his body at the schooner, they'll want to see me."

"I gave Etienne his bandages and showed Marie how to adjust them."

"What a wonderful coconspirator you are, Healer of Wounds! How am I ever to repay you?" He sat from habit with the unmarred left side of his face quartering on the girl. Suddenly she straightened, startling him with the tenseness of her look.

"Why do you sit that way?" she demanded angrily.

"What—what do you mean?" he asked, confused by her tone.

"You treat me as if I were—oh, like the one he came back to." She pointed toward the adjacent sickroom.

Vaguely her meaning dawned on him. Scars— to her—were an accolade. Those straight eyes of hers never turned in horror from a wound.

"Forgive me," he said, and his eyes clouded with mist. "I knew the day I met you—that you saw beyond—the scars."

Muttered words from the sick man drew them to his bedside.

"We were happy—before," they heard him mutter. "I know—I know—it was hard. But couldn't you bear it—for the sake of—the old days? Handsome Galbraith—it was—once. Then—that shell! Good-by, Handsome Galbraith!—But you—I loved—needed. Your eyes! God! the look in them—when you saw me!"

The eyes of Joan Quarrier and Guthrie met. Two tears, ignored, slowly wet her cheeks. The face of the man was twisted with pity.

"What hell he must have lived through!"

"And she—why are such creatures put into the world?" said the girl, huskily. "When his need of her was greatest—she unmasked her little soul."

Involuntarily Garth Guthrie started. How unerringly she had characterized Ethel. Had she guessed, he wondered.

"I can guess what followed," Garth replied. "I know him. Heart-broken—he often spoke of her—he went to drink, to forget. Then it happened."

"But after all, are they sure he's the man?"

"The circumstantial evidence puts it beyond question—the description, his being here in the north."

While Joan caught a few hours' sleep in the room of Guthrie which he had again given her, the factor sat beside the unconscious man, whose tortured lungs labored for breath.

Before she lay down the girl stood quizzically before the photographs which still stood in their places on his dresser.

"You're very lovely," she murmured. "It's not strange that he can't forget you. He still remembers or you'd not be here—still remembers, although he wants me to think he has forgotten."

CHAPTER XIV

—1—

In early afternoon Etienne swung back the trade-house door with a crash.

"Dog-team on de riviere!"

"All right," replied Guthrie. "Tell Miss Quarrier on your way. Now you get into those bandages and into bed, and don't have the children around if they come to talk to you."

"I am ver' seek man," laughed the half-breed and went out.

So the police had come? He hadn't expected them for days, but they must have reached Albany from Moose the day he left.

They would pass at least one night at Elkwan to talk it over. There was no alternative to having them eat at his quarters. There lay the danger. He would rush them through supper and to the trade-house where they would sleep, as, of course, Joan Quarrier had his spare bed. Etienne's accident they would have heard of from Cameron, and Etienne and Marie were more than equal to entertaining them with the picture of a man suffering from a painful wound. The rub would come at meal time. Would the opiate keep McDonald quiet—and his breathing—would they hear it?

"Anne, you can't speak English—don't answer any questions. Understand?" The broad face of the cook stretched in a smile as she winked. "Nama," she answered in Cree.

"Good! And when you hear us come in for supper, make as much noise as you can in the kitchen. Sing all you wish, rattle the pans. When you wait on us, talk to me in Cree—all the time. See? They may hear him breathe."

"Enh-enh!" replied the Cree.

"How is he now?" Guthrie asked Joan.

Her eyes reflected her anxiety. "Worse—much worse. Raging fever—105; pulse running away. He's been straining terribly at his bonds. Lucky you and Etienne made them strong."

"You gave him the opiate, of course?"

"Yes, he's feeling it now. By supper time he'll be quiet—but his breathing?"

"That's what worries me." Guthrie went to the sick room where the giant, bound to his bed by thick bandages of cloth, lay moaning in a half stupor. "Old Craig. To finish like this!" Sorrowfully, the man who was imperiling his future that his friend might have his chance went out to meet the approaching dog-team.

With Shot beside him, curious of the strange dogs, Garth watched the visitors climb the cliff trail behind their team of scrubs.

"Good day!" called the older of the two men, stepping forward with extended hand. This is Mr. Rawdon."

"I've been expecting you," said Guthrie. "You can turn your dogs into that empty shack after you've fed them. They'll be safe there. My only assistant, as you know, is laid up."

"You come straight from Seal cove?" he asked carelessly. "They were expecting you when I left Moose with Miss Quarrier."

At the mention of Joan's name, the heavy face of Rawdon lighted with interest.

"Yes," replied Farrel, lighting his pipe. "We went over to the island with Cameron's people who are guarding the fur. But, of course, we wanted to talk to you and your man before we got down to work."

"Got down to work? What do you mean?" Guthrie's cold eyes studied the face of the inspector. A decent face, he thought, honest, human.

"Why we found only three bodies. Cameron says you found four, including McDonald's. McDonald's wasn't there."

"McDonald's body not there? Impossible!"

"No, we made no mistake. The Indians must have spirited it away. They tell me there's a fortune in fur on that schooner, too, but there's no sign of its being plundered."

The watchful Guthrie had his opening and lost no time in developing it.

"Why, we left McDonald dead in his berth, from flu, I suppose. Breault was in the cabin, and the other two in berths. The interpreter and a sailor they claim were on the boat must have made for the nearest camp. Did you search the ice? The Indians might have buried him. He had some Indians picking up fur for him on the island. They may have found him and given him a decent grave in the ice."

"That's true, but why should they leave the rest on the boat?"

"He was the big man—the chief. He had a great hold on them. That might explain it." Guthrie suggested. "Well, I wonder what they've got for you hungry men to eat," he added. "Make yourselves at home while I go over and ask Old Anne when she'll be ready for us."

"By the way," called Farrel as Garth opened the door. "How's your man, wound all right? He can talk, can't he? I want to get his statement."

"He's doing finely—thanks to his army nurse. She saved him from infection."

They were waiting for Garth at the house. Her eyes shadowy with strain and anxiety, Joan met him at the door.

"The morphine? Is it working?" he asked.

"He's quiet now, but I don't know how long it will last. It seems lost on him. I've given him all I dare."

"His temperature—pulse?"

"Awful! I don't see how he lives. It looks like the crisis tonight."

"I can't hear him breathe. Is supper ready? I'll bring them in and rush it through."

"Yes."

As he turned to go out he heard a sob. She stood at the door of the bedroom.

"To think he should die like this!" she said.

Guthrie strode back to her. He took a limp hand in both of his. "Healer of Wounds. I love you! Courage!" And he went out.

At the trade-house door his set face dropped its lines.

"Well, Old Anne is about ready for us. It's short variety but I hope there'll be enough for your appetites. I'm sorry, but I'll have to put you up here. Miss Quarrier has my extra room."

As Joan Quarrier, pale, but mistress of her nerves, met them in the living room with a forced graciousness and was introduced, the eyes of Rawdon bulged in patent admiration of the picture she made.

Appearing on the minute with the stew, Old Anne filled the room with the harsh sibilants of the Cree tongue.

"Don't mind Anne," Guthrie laughed, making conversation as his guests ate. "She's a bit queer in the head, but her heart's all right, isn't it, Anne?"

Anne turned upon him a chaos of chatter. From the kitchen, where she went for the boiled goose, the staunch old Cree kept up a rattle of pans, until she hurriedly returned to resume her conversation with the man whose ears strained for sounds through the shut door of the sick room.

As yet no sound from the room. Thus far—victory!

"Well," said Farrel, comfortably, as he finished, "your cook may be a bit talkative, Guthrie, but I sure have enjoyed her supper."

"Glad you have. Sorry it wasn't better."

"And you've got to run to that half-breed?" demurred Rawdon, now quite at his ease with Joan. "I don't see why you can't stay a while and talk to us."

"Oh, a nurse always puts duty before pleasure, Mr. Rawdon," she replied, with a stiff smile, as with tilted head she waited, nerves taut as wires, for the repetition of a sound she had heard—a sound incomprehensible, terrifying, from the closed room.

"Well," he laughed, "that's what I call a compliment. But you'll be back soon?"

"Back soon, you whelp!" cursed Guthrie inwardly. "If you don't finish that food, I'll choke you with it!" Then his heart skipped—to shake him with its hammering, as he heard a thud—a sound of ripping cloth. Raising his voice, he said sharply: "If you're through, gentlemen, we'll have a smoke beside the trade-house stove," and with Farrell, rose from the table where Rawdon lingered, hypnotized by the face of the girl who sat rigid with fear.

Guthrie flung open the door, admitting the biting air. "Rawdon!" The words snapped through the silent room like the crack of a whip. "Miss Quarrie has a dressing to do for Savanne." Then behind the shut door, a crash, curses, a groan froze him, desperate, where he stood. The game was up. He had lost!

"Why, what's that? Somebody in there?" demanded the younger policeman, rising, head thrust in the direction of the sounds. Gray-faced, Joan Quarrier, like one under a spell, watched the hawk-like features of Guthrie harden—saw the gray eyes grow cold, as the surprised Farrel turned to his host.

"Get Etienne, quick!" Like the ring of tempered metal the voice of Guthrie crossed to the Cree in the kitchen door. She disappeared.

"What's this all about, Guthrie—this racket in there?" stormed Rawdon, heatedly.

As the bewildered Farrel waited for Guthrie's answer, his eyes widened as he saw the groping fingers of the factor of Elkwan, who leaned against the gun-rack, find and close on the butt of his automatic.

Then with a crash the door of the bedroom was thrown back, and a giant figure, shreds of cloth hanging from naked shoulders and arms, swayed, head lowered, in the doorway. Burning with fever, the wild eyes above the grinning mouth glared with the ferocity of a mad beast at Rawdon, who instinctively recoiled from the diabolic countenance thrust toward him. Gripping the door jambs for support, the great muscles of his arms flexed. Laughing McDonald shook the room with a roar: "Give 'em the steel, Canadians! Steel for their gas! Give 'em—" With a gasp, a hoarse rumble of the deep throat, a choking cough, the massive frame pitched headlong to the floor.

On her knees beside the man whose pulse she could not feel, sobbed Joan Quarrier. Gripping the relaxed hand of the friend he had failed to save, Guthrie listened for a heart beat. There was none. Laughing McDonald had joined the silent battalions.

"He's gone?" he asked the girl, while the policemen, dumb in their surprise, gaped at the two figures with their dead.

She nodded.

"Gentlemen," Guthrie turned his face to his guests. "You are too late. Your man has escaped."

"Stan' back!"

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

Article Ten.

Assisting Bids by Third Hand

THIS subject will be divided into the following headings. Third hand bidding.

(1) After a suit bid by dealer and pass by second hand.

(2) After a suit bid by dealer and an overbid by second hand.

(3) After a no trump bid by dealer and a pass by second hand.

(4) After a no trump bid by dealer and an overbid by second hand.

(5) After any bid by dealer has been doubled by second hand.

(1) After dealer has bid one of a suit and second hand has passed, third hand must not pass "just because his partner's bid stands" as there are several situations in which he is expected to bid. If his partner's bid is in a minor suit and he has a major suit good enough for a defensive bid he should bid it because of the greater game-going possibility of a major suit. He should change the bid to no trump if he has the other three suits protected with one and one-half quick tricks and no major suit bid.

When an original bid is made on a suit of four or five cards it is important that the partner should hold approximately his share of the remaining cards of that suit, and if he does not hold that many he should if possible make some bid to inform his partner of that fact. Three small cards, or two if one is as high as the queen, is therefore called normal expectancy. A bid made to announce a smaller holding than this is called a denial bid.

If third hand is void of suit bid by dealer or has only small one in it he should make a denial bid in another suit or no trump if he holds as good as defensive bid strength—that is, one and one-half quick tricks, or he should name any six card suit.

If he holds only two small cards of partner's suit he should take out his partner's minor suit bid by a major, or take out one major by the other one provided he has defensive strength. But he should pass rather than take out a major suit by a minor.

Examples of overbidding partner's unopposed suit bid. Dealer having bid a diamond and second hand having passed, third hand, when holding the following, should:

(1) S—A x x x x, H—K x x, D—x, C—x x x x bid one spade.

(2) S—x x x x, H—K Q x x x, D—O, C—Q J x x bid one heart.

(3) S—A x x, H—Q x x x, D—x x x, C—K x x bid one no trump.

Dealer having bid a heart and second hand having passed, third hand, holding the following, should:

(4) S—A Q x x x, H—x x, D—x x x, C—Q x x bid one spade.

(5) S—x x x, H—x x, D—A Q x x x, C—Q x x pass.

(2) After a Suit Bid by Dealer and Overbid by Second Hand.

If third hand holds normal expectancy in his partner's suit he should then consider whether or not his hand is strong enough to raise his partner's bid. Without normal expectancy he should not raise, no matter what other strength he may hold. With normal expectancy what is needed for a raise? According to our rules for an original bid, dealer is counting upon his partner's hand for three tricks, therefore partner must not count those three again. But if he has four he may raise once, and he may raise as many times as he has probable tricks above three.

The next matter of vital importance is to know how to count probable assisting tricks, which is done quite differently from counting tricks for an original bid. In counting probable tricks in an assisting hand, first double the whole and half quick tricks of all suits except the one bid. Then add to this, one for each honor as high as the queen in the trump suit; one for holding four or more small trumps (if an honor is counted the extra small one must not be); also one trick if able to ruff the second round of a plain suit (that is, if holding a singleton); and two tricks if able to ruff both first and second rounds (in other words, if void of a suit). Having a doubleton, the ability to ruff the third round may be counted ½ a trick, so that with two doubletons one more trick may be added.

Examples of counting assisting tricks to raise partner's space bid:

(1)		(2)
♠—x x x		♠—x x x x	(1)
♡—A x x x	(2)	♡—A x x x	(2)
♢—x	(1)	♢—x x	(½)
♣—K x x x	(1)	♣—x x	(½)
(3)		(4)
♠—K J x x	(1)	♠—x x x x x	(1)
♡—A Q x	(2)	♡—K x x	(1)
♢—K Q x	(2)	♢—x x	(½)
♣—x x x		♣—x x	(½)

Nos. 1 and 2 are worth one raise; No. 3, two raises; but No. 4 should be passed as it contains only three probable tricks. This last hand forcibly illustrates the fact that even a large number of small cards in your partner's suit will not add much strength to his hand. In this case if the bidder has five high spades the probabilities are that five of these small ones would fall upon them leaving but one to make an extra trick.

You Don't Need a Doctor

"If you feel that the world is growing better," remarked the Man on the Car, "you don't need a doctor."—Toledo Blade.

DAIRY FACTS

BIG FACTORS IN PRODUCING MILK

Because of the prevailing high prices of feeds much stress has been laid on weeding out the poor cows and keeping only those that produce at a profit. "This is sound policy, only if the cows have been properly fed and cared for, states E. A. Gauntt, assistant dairy specialist at the New Jersey College of Agriculture.

"Two factors must be considered in milk production, namely, inherited ability of the cow to produce milk, and feed and care. The importance of proper feeding was proved recently by the Minnesota experiment station, which purchased four poor cows from a member of a cow-testing association. This man thought he had fed his cows properly. He bought large quantities of mill feeds. He fed a mixture of 90 parts of bran, 80 of middlings, 18 of ready-mixed feed and 4 of oil meal. He fed five pounds of this to each cow daily. The cows were on pasture six months. This feed cost him $49.46 a cow and the average milk production was 4,662 pounds of milk and 182 pounds of fat. His net profit was $37.90 per cow.

"After the college purchased them their feed was changed to a balanced ration and instead of feeding each cow five pounds, they were fed according to the amount of milk thy produced—in other words, the more milk they gave, the more feed they were given. The cows were kept on pasture only five months instead of six, and got alfalfa hay and corn silage instead of timothy. This change boosted the average to 6,375 pounds of milk—an increase of 36.7 per cent. The butterfat increase was 77 pounds per cow. The feed cost was $61.42 instead of $49.46, but the profit per cow was $62.90 instead of $37.90. This means that by proper feeding the owner could have increased his net profit $25 per cow, which would not have been a bad investment."

Staff Cheap Insurance in Handling Dairy Bull

A few days ago a Fort Collins man was killed by his Holstein bull. He was leading the bull into the barn by means of a halter and lead strap when the accident occurred. This is only one more added to the great list of people who have been killed or seriously injured by bulls, states L. P. McCann of the animal husbandry department, Colorado Agricultural college, who adds that this accident, like many others, could have been avoided if the handler had not trusted the bull.

Every dairy bull, warns Professor McCann, should be regarded as a potential killer and handled accordingly. The great number of accidents occurring from careless handling proves this to be true. In spite of this men and women continue to risk their lives every day, thinking that their bulls are different from the others that have already taken a toll of lives.

For the man who handles one of these animals, the small amount of money required to buy a good bull staff is about the cheapest life insurance in which a man can invest.

Self-Feeding Cows Not Profitable at Illinois

Tests were recently made at the University of Illinois on eight dairy cows to determine the value of self-feeding. The practice was not economical nor were the milk yields appreciably increased.

For a short period after calving the amount of feed consumed was too small. Later it was too large, and the cows increased in weight. The animals were not injured by the practice because they were gradually accustomed to it.

The chief purpose of the test was to determine the relative palatability of different feeds. Corn proved most palatable of the low protein concentrates. Complete details may be obtained by writing for Bulletin 289 published by the Illinois experiment station, Urbana.

Buying Dairy Cows

When buying cows at a closing out sale of a man who has been in a test association, one gets a chance at cows that have records. The better cows are mostly worth the money they bring, especially if they have not had the best of care. If one buys such a cow that has the earmarks of a dairy cow and has a fair record with ordinary care, and takes her home and feeds her and makes her comfortable one may venture to say the cow will do her part.

Danger in Warm Cream

It is a common practice among farmers to keep cream too warm even in winter. Cream should never be allowed to freeze, because it is then hard to get representative samples. In order to avoid this, some producers keep their cream near a stove or in a place so warm that it is likely to sour or to absorb bad odors or both. In order to produce the highest quality cream, it is necessary to be provided the year around with a cool place, free from all contaminations.

Feeding Mangels

The feeding of freshly dug mangels in large quantities frequently induces scours. To safeguard the possibility of this, the beets should be stored for several weeks before feeding. In feeding mangels there is less likelihood of imparting undesirable flavors to milk if they are fed immediately after milking rather than before milking. Kale and rape are two succulent feeds most likely to impart undesirable flavors to milk if fed within two hours before milking.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

Fortune Telling

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE is a window sign that flaunted itself in my face every time I walked down the long street in Provincetown during the month of my vacation:

"Spiritualistic Readings
By Appointment."

I knew very well that the whole thing was a fake and that the last two words on the placard were merely for psychological effect. There was no crowd rushing in to obtain a reading. In fact, I never saw anyone entering the house, though I passed it two or three times daily for weeks. There was no necessity of making an appointment; one could have had his future and his past laid before him any time he was inclined to call. The sign interested me, however. I wondered what the reader would say if I should go in. I had curiosity, but I still had a trace of judgment left, so I looked and passed on.

It is strange how much we like to be told what we are and especially what we are going to be. The newly arrived guest at the inn who sits across from me at table told me at luncheon today that I had a psychic hand, and then she looked wise and made a few other personal remarks about my possibilities. Now, I don't know whether a psychic hand is a desirable possession or not, but I judged from what she suggested that it is.

A clever man who depicts character from looking at a few lines of one's handwriting came into the office a few weeks ago and predicted our future for us. He told me I was impulsive and tender-hearted, and a lot of things that anyone with half an eye could tell by looking at me even if he had never come within a hundred miles of my handwriting. Of course it pleased me.

Jim was sitting at the desk with his head on his hand indulging in an exciting spell of the blues. He came into the game and deposited a specimen of his chirography before the expert.

"You are easily discouraged," the interpreter of penmanship said. "At the present time you are in love, and the object of your affections does not feel as warmly as you would desire. You are changeable, and having tried one job, you are likely soon to give it up and attempt another."

Jim was amazed.

"How do you suppose he does it?" the boy asked. But you see it isn't so difficult as it seems if you keep your eyes open.

There are wonderful ways of reading the future and of looking into the past—tea grounds and cards and the lines on one's hands. It is unbelievable what a palmist can tell you if you only let her hold your hand for a while, and most of us like what we are told, especially if we know it isn't true; and though we laugh to scorn what we are told, yet after all it feeds our pride and our self-esteem.

But I wonder at times if we really could read the future, or have it done for us, and find out what is in store for us and when, if we would have the courage to do it. I doubt it.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Human Circulation System

The circulation of blood is divided into three systems, each one having a special mission. The first system carries the blood through the body, the second through the lungs, and the third through the liver. These three form one great system which allows the heart to pump a drop of blood through the entire body in half a minute.

"World's Biggest" Pie Has Ton of Apples

Yakima, Wash.—Heralded as the "world's biggest," an apple pie weighing more than a ton and requiring a specially constructed oven and a derrick for handling was baked in Yakima recently.

Four bakers, wielding rolling pins 15 feet long, rolled the dough for the crust. Fires were started a day ahead in the huge oven to assure the proper heat. Apples weighing 2,100 pounds were precooked in a cannery. The pie was of the open-faced variety, with strips of crust criss-crossing over the vast surface.

The baking of the pie was preliminary to celebration of Apple week. Two thousand school children, each of whom had been promised a bite of the pie, milled around the large outdoor oven while it was baking.

Stone Lillies Found

Stockton, Calif.—Stone lilies dating back to the lower Devonian age of 150,000,000 years ago, are among the fossil specimens brought to the College of the Pacific by Prof Joa H. Jonte, head of the geology department, from fossil quarries in Iowa, where he passed the summer.

A fossil fish tooth, 135,000,000 years old, buried in a bit of coraline limestone, which had been kicked about for 15 years in a barnyard as "just a rock," is one of the most valuable specimens on display at the college.

New Method Cleans Rusty Water Pipes

New York.—Rust-choked iron water pipes in a 35-story New York office building have been cleared by a new acid solvent, and the vast expense of repiping the whole structure avoided. The process, worked out by F. N. Speller, E. L. Chappell and R. P. Russell of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is expected by engineers to become a very important factor in building management.

It has long been known that a solution of hydrochloric acid in hot water will dissolve rust, but the drawback has been that it will also dissolve iron and steel, so that it has never been considered practicable for use on a large scale. The three Massachusetts engineers, however, added an organic "inhibitor," which has the effect of preventing the acid from corroding the metal while still permitting it to attack the rust.

In order to carry out their operations with the least possible inconvenience to the tenants they divided the plumbing of the building into sections, attacking these one by one on Saturday afternoons, so that the solution could get in its work and be flushed out of the pipes before the resumption of business on Monday morning.

Forest Fires in 1926 Cost Over 26 Millions

Washington.—Forest fires in the United States last year caused more than $26,900,000 damage, according to the Agricultural department.

There were 91,793 fires. More than 72 per cent of the fires were caused by man and 12 per cent by lightning. No cause was obtainable for 16 per cent of those reported.

Mississippi, with 23,170 fires, suffered more than any other state, while Alabama was next with 14,953 and Georgia third with 6,448.

Southeastern states as a group—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi, had more forest fires than any other section last year with 54,200 conflagrations reported.

Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Texas came next with 10,657 fires, the Northeastern states had 6,521, the Appalachian states 4,827, the East Mississippi states 1,747 and the Lake states 3,326, the Rocky mountain states 3,877, and the Pacific states 6,842.

Slaughter of Whales Has Brought Protest

Wholesale slaughter of whales by Norwegian fleets in the Ross sea is being protested by naturalists and scientists of Australia and New Zealand, who say that continuation of the practice will mean the extinction of whales.

A proposal to call an international convention to regulate the killing is being considered.

It is reported that two Norwegian ships operating from Stewart island in the Ross sea in the latter part of 1926 and the early months of 1927 captured 700 whales, yielding $2,500,000 worth of oil, and that another ship, with Hobart as its base, took about 50,000 barrels of whale oil to Norway.

It is estimated that 1,500 whales were killed in the last year. The territory is under the jurisdiction of New Zealand, which receives a royalty on the oil.

Minnesota Saw Flies Kill Tamarack Trees

Flies are killing off the tamarack trees near Grand Rapids, Minn., by starving them to death.

So declares Henry Goldberg, forest ranger, who has just returned from a tour through Itasca county forests. Goldberg states that he found the woods full of winged insects called saw flies which feed upon the needles of leaves by means of which the tree manufactures its food from the air and soil. By successive assaults the flies literally starve the trees to death.

The forest ranger stated the return of the leaf eaters may indicate a repetition of the plague between 1909 and 1916 in Minnesota, when the insects killed 65 per cent of the merchantable tamarack in the state valued at $2,500,000.

The New Woman

Governor Weeks of Vermont, who designed the 4 by 6-foot birthday card sent to President Coolidge in South Dakota, has the Vermonter's sturdy hatred of ultra-modern fashions and customs.

At a Montpelier reception a banker nodded in the direction of a New York lady in a very short skirt who sat with her knees crossed smoking a cigarette in a long tube.

"A new woman, I suppose," he said.

Governor Weeks glanced at the lady and observed:

"I should say an old woman repainted."

Celebrates 104th Birthday

"I be merry," was the quick response of Mrs. Sophia Bird of Loughborough, Ireland, when congratulated on her recent birthday, which was her one hundred fourth. "I am very comfortable, and shall do my best to hold up for another birthday, she added smiling. All day long there was a procession of well-wishers who were met with a cheerful word and smile. Mrs. Bird arises at 9:30 o'clock every morning and retires at 9.

"Well," he replied, "in fairness it ought to be conceded that the old-fashioned dime novel which is now selling for $2.50 is printed on better paper."

Indians Losing Tradition

Washington.—If the languages, beliefs, traditions and customs of the Alaskan Indians are not to go the way of those of so many other native American tribes and be forever lost to human history, ethnologists will have to work double time in the next few years. This is the warning brought back from an expedition to the Yukon by Herbert W. Krieger, ethnologist of the National museum under the Smithsonian institution.

Mr. Krieger found that the younger Indians have become thoroughly Americanized. For them the potlatches—once ceremonial events of great importance for the propitiation of those spirits who could insure good hunting or good fishing—are merely opportunities for a good time. They have forgotten their own magic and their tribal folk lore. Only the old people remember these things, and if they are to be preserved these old people must be interviewed before they die.

Traces Eskimo Sites.

Mr. Krieger's expedition was carried out with aid from the Joseph Henry fund of the National Academy of Sciences. Its main purpose was to follow up certain archeological and ethnological leads uncovered by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka in his survey of Alaska under the Smithsonian institution last year. Doctor Hrdlicka traced old Indian and Eskimo sites which might throw light on ancient man in Alaska and so help the solution of the vexed problem of man's origin in America.

As a result of Mr. Krieger's excavations at Eonasila and his investigations at Anvik, Hologochalk, Shageluk Slough and elsewhere along the Yukon, he believes that any archeological evidences of ancient man in the interior of Alaska are going to be very hard to find, though there is much of later date to be uncovered.

Mr. Krieger's most interesting discovery was made far from the mouth of the Yukon; it comprised examples of the carvings of a coast tribe unknown before last year when both Doctor Hrdlicka and the Canadian archeologist, Doctor Jenness, found specimens of these carvings indicating the existence of the tribe on St. Lawrence and Nelson islands.

They are done in old ivory and are examples of an art unlike anything else known from Alaska. The modern natives dig them up from old graves and recarve the old ivory for commercial purposes, thus destroying many important specimens.

Evidence that a uniform stone culture prevailed at one time from the Yukon down to southeastern Alaska was uncovered by Mr. Krieger. He found certain stone implements, chiefly a type of ax, common to the entire area.

The places visited by Mr. Krieger on the lower Yukon represent the fusion points between the Eskimo and Indian cultures. Although the interior is now entirely Indian territory, Mr. Krieger found pottery, masks and other objects which typify Eskimo culture. The Indians there have many traditions of battles with the Eskimos.

Follows Trail to Idaho.

On his way back from Alaska Mr. Krieger continued earlier explorations for the bureau of American ethnology along the Columbia and Snake rivers. Last year he succeeded in tracing a single prehistoric culture characterized by semi-subterranean circular houses and cremation burials from British Columbia through Washington to Oregon. This year he followed traces of the same culture down the Snake river into Idaho, hoping that it would lead him into Utah and the northern outposts of early Pueblo culture, thus connecting the prehistoric peoples of the West from Canada to Arizona.

But he lost the trail in the Snake river canyon of central Idaho, the traditional home of the Bannock and other Shoshonean tribes.

One of Life's Hardest Moments

"Sea Flea" Speedy

London.—George de Gasenko crossed the English channel from Boulogne to Dover in 20 minutes in his Sea Flea, which looks like a cross between a submarine and a seaplane.

The queer craft averaged 93 miles an hour for the trip, and the inventor was so cheered by his success that he predicted a similar craft, holding 100 passengers, could easily be built to cross the Atlantic in 40 hours.

De Gasenko's craft embodies the principles of water bugs. It draws only three inches of water, although 35 feet long and 18 feet high. The hull is of mahogany two-thirds of an inch thick. With a load of fuel it weighs only 2,000 pounds.

With two small wings and an airplane propeller, the Sea Flea at low speeds skims the surface of the water, but when it approaches its maximum it almost lifts it into the air, and like a flying fish flits from the crest of one wave to the crest of another, meanwhile maintaining a perfect balance, insuring against seasickness.

In May, 1926, after several short but successful tests, De Gasenko set out from Marseilles for a trip across the Mediterranean and along the African coast, but the propeller was splintered by a heavy sea and the inventor was obliged to put in at Saintes Maries, near Arles.

De Gasenko is a native of the Ukraine, but was trained in Germany.

MENLO PARK

Death of Maria Doyle

Miss Maria Doyle passed away, on Tuesday after a lingering illness. She was born and grew to girlhood in Menlo Park, the home of her parents since the sixties. In her younger years, Miss Doyle was active in charitable work in and about Menlo Park, doing much to alleviate the suffering of others. She was the daughter of the late John T. Doyle, who in his time was the nestor of the bar of San Francisco. His conduct of the Pious Fund Case won him fame and glory in the annals of California jurisprudence. Doyle spent the greater portion of his long life in preparing and fighting the celebrated case. He was successful in the litigation in securing from the Mexican government many million of dollars for the Catholic Diocese of San Francisco and for the archbishop. Before he passed away he wrote a book containing a history of the case Doyle and his brother-in-law, U. S. Senator Casserly, in the sixties bought a large tract of land extending from the bay to the Southern Pacific property here. Included in the vast domain are the communities of East Palo Alto, North Palo Alto, Bayshore Park. Doyle and the late General Sherman were classmates at Georgetown college, Washington. Sherman Doyle, the youngest son of the great lawyer, now a famous attorney at Washington, was named after the general by Doyle.

Miss Doyle possessed some of the brilliancy of her father, was witty, talented and a wonderful conversationalist. The funeral took place on Thursday from the Church of the Nativity. Interment was in the family tomb in Holy Cross cemetery, Menlo Park. Of the seven children of the Doyle family only two survive, Sherman Doyle and Edmund Doyle, the sanitary commissioner of Menlo Park.

Thanks to Constable Grill

Constable F. B. Grill is deserving the thanks of the people of Menlo Park for removing the pergola seats on the corner of Oak Grove avenue and Railroad avenue. Of late they have become the rendezvous for hoboes and for hours the walking gentry would occupy them giving the town a hick appearance. Then, too, those who became "stewed" would pre-empt the benches for sleeping quarters, there to dream sweet dreams of the days before Volstead made his appearance in the land.

Garfield School Growing

The growth of the peninsula is so rapid that it is almost impossible to keep pace with the development. Trustees in building school houses will have to possess big imaginations and forsight for the future in looking out for the needs of the onrushing tide of population.

MENLO PARK IS INCORPORATED

By D. E. O'KEEFE

Menlo Park has finally incorporated after a long battle of thirty years by the progressive citizens of the community who saw the benefits to be derived from such incorporation.

The voters on Tuesday came to the polls early and all day the electorate crowded the voting booths to place a stamp in the little square opposite "Vote for Incorporation." The big vote that came out assured the success of the issue.

Dr. A. E. Blake led the ticket for trustee and no doubt will be the first mayor of Menlo Park, where he was born, being the first white child born within the corporate limits of the new city.

The vote in full is as follows:

For Councilmen

Alfred E. Blake, 291; J. C. Brown, 203; Frank R. Cain, 144; William Charles, 79; E. P. Clough 89; W. E. Dale, 165; J. C. Ellis, 232; E. Gardner, 93; J. J. Harcom 200; J. H. Heltzel, 201; E. J. McLoughlin, 121; George A. Montel, 110; W. L. Roper, 125.

For City Clerk

Fannie I. Kurtz, 207; Earle M. Rankin, 159.

For City Treasurer

J. W. Ryan, 315.

It was a wonderful victory for the people, the culmination of a battle began thirty years ago and continued at intervals since that time. It would be invidious to mention any one in connection with the work done that brought about the success of the election, save that the managers of the campaign left nothing undone to bring about the gratifying result. The Times-Gazette takes no little credit in the splendid victory for progress and advancement.

On May 20, 1897 the first show down in the battle for incorporation took place in the Menlo Park grammar school, where were gathered the citizens of Menlo Park to decide the momentuous question. The following account of the meeting written by D. E. O'Keefe appeared in the colums of the Times-Gazette on May 22, 1897. The prophesy then made has been justified. A perusal of the report will show that many of those taking part in the proceedings at that time have answered the final call.

"Incorporation suffered a temporary defeat, but its advocates have not given up hope. On the contrary, they are sanguine of ultimately winning, and will carry on the campaign with renewed vigor. Their cause is righteous. It cannot be lost. The action of the public meeting Wednesday only staid proceedings for a short time—in fact, the action by the meeting has been the means of arousing the towns people to a more determined effort. Wednesday evening being the time set for the hearing the report of the incorporation committee, Assembly hall was comfortably filled. John MacBain opened the meeting and set the ball rolling by ordering the committee's report read. A protest was also read from the wealthy residents, representing $750,000 of the assessable property within the district desired to be incorporated. It was moved to adopt the report which set forth the boundaries described in the Times-Gazette some weeks ago, the assessable property within the district, the revenue to be derived, etc., and this motion brought on a storm of protest. John T. Doyle secured the floor and in a lengthy argument in which he indulged in personalities that injured his side of the case somewhat he urged his hearers to consider the subject matter before them. However, he presented some facts and figures that went to make up a formidable argument against incorporation. He read a letter from Archbishop Riordan that was favorable to Mr. Doyle's view. A half dozen citizens answered Mr. Doyle's argument and honors were about even up when the former introduced the following resolution. A counter resolution was declared out of order by the chair:

"Resolved by the Citizens of Menlo Park in public meeting this 19th day of May, 1897, that after a full consideration we think it inexpedient to incorporate Menlo Park, as a city with boundaries proposed by the committee."

The way in which a vote should be taken on the resolution created a wild scene. Those opposed to incorporation urged a roll call, while those in favor wanted a secret ballot. It was openly charged that the employees of wealthy people present were coerced in voting according to the views of their employers. Finally, a motion to vote by secret ballott prevailed and balloting began, E. B. Ryan, J. H. O'Keefe and John B. Kelly and D. E. O'Keefe having charge of the election.

In the confusion that followed many voted "for" believing that they were casting their ballot for incorporation when they were doing just the contrary. The mistake, however, was fatal; for when the votes were counted there were 30 in favor of the resolution and 29 against it. It is safe in saying that if those in favor of incorporation voted as they intended to, the resolution would not have received more than 15 votes. The people are not satisfied with the conclusion arrived at and will issue a call for another meeting to be held within a few weeks"

Another attempt was made to incorporate Menlo Park in 1910 but this also failed, the wealthy residents of Menlo Park and Fair Oaks opposing the enterprise.

In 1923 an effort was again tried to incorporate. A large meeting was held in Duff and Doyle hall and the law was set in motion but before the people of Menlo Park could file its petition the Town of Atherton filed its petition first and later the town of Atherton was incorporated. Last year Menlo Park finally voted on the question and the election was lost by 29 votes, a factional disagreement among the managers of the campaign being the cause.

Menlo Park was the second town of San Mateo county to incorporate. On March 23, 1874, an act of incorporation was passed. The incorporation at that date was made for the purpose of enabling the inhabitants to carry on a uniform system of street improvement, and when this need had passed there seemed to be little to warrant the further continuance of its corporate existence. Under the law of California as it existed in 1874 the governor of the state commissioned those who were to act as trustees at the beginning of the town after incorporation. They were L. P. Cooley, John T. Doyle, Geo. C. Boardman, Charles N. Felton and W. J. Adams. Their first mteting was held April 25, 1874, at which John T. Doyle was elected president and Robert L. Behre, clerk. Mr. Boardman shortly afaerwards resigned and E. P. Rowe was commissioned to fill his vacancy. Mr. Rowe shortly afterwards became clerk in place of Mr. Behre. On July 6, 1874 an electioen was held for the purpose of choosing a new board, at which time, L. P. Cooley, Charles N. Felton, W. J. Adams, D. Kuck, and R. G. Sneath were elected. L. P. Cooley was chosen president, and D. Kuck, clerk, Menlo Park as incorporated took in a large portion of what is now known as Menlo Park and a great portion of the land that is now included in the city of Atherton, but beacuse of the lack of business, disincorporation proceedings were had which dinished the existence of the municipality.

Menlo Park now takes her rightful place among the cities of the peninsula.

Menlo Park is all that its name would indicate, a beautiful park set amidst a grove of trees. Nature was indeed prodigal when it fashioned the section embraced by this thriving community. Not only were many beauties placed there, but a climate was added which makes the place one of rare charm.

Clara Belli filed the last will and testament of Isaia Belli, who died at Colma on November 2. The value of the estate comprised of real estate and personal property is about $10,000. He was a pioneer of Colma, years old.
